

Analyzing a photograph

What information do you already know about this photograph? Do you know the date it was taken, its location, or the reason for the photograph? Record this information below.

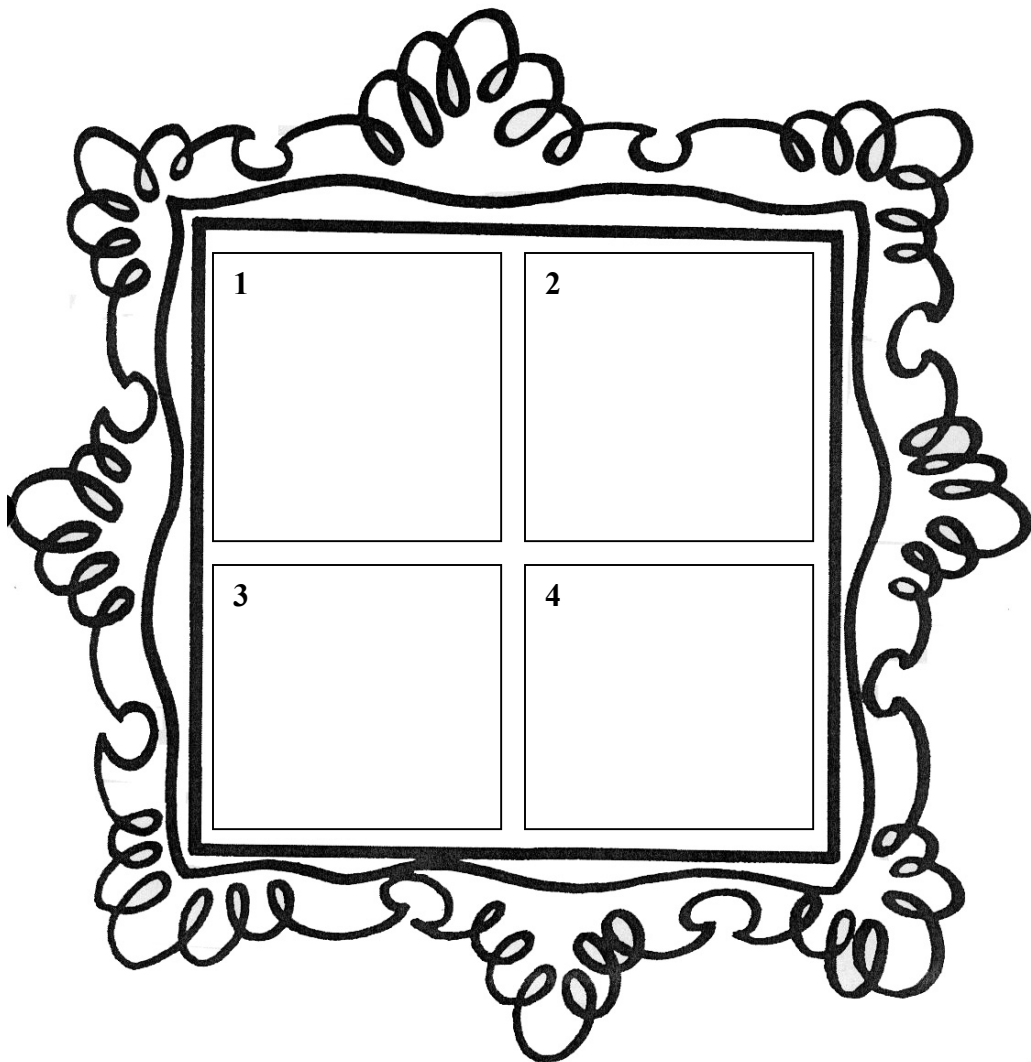

Look at the photograph. What are the first things you notice about this photograph?

Use a picture frame divided into four parts to lay over the photograph. Study each part of the photograph in detail. Record what you observe in each of the four parts of the photograph in the boxes below.

1	2
3	4

How can you add your observations of the photograph to what you know about the date, location and reasons for the photograph? What other ideas do you have about what this photograph tells you about the subject you are studying?

What questions do you have about this photograph? What can you do to find answers to these questions?

A decorative frame with a thick, black, hand-drawn border featuring intricate, swirling scrollwork. Inside the frame is a 2x2 grid of four empty rectangular boxes. Each box is numbered in the top-left corner: '1' in the top-left box, '2' in the top-right box, '3' in the bottom-left box, and '4' in the bottom-right box. The boxes are intended for students to write their observations and questions related to a photograph.