MAIN CHARACTERISTICS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

The armed forces of Portugal consist of the home army and the colonial army. The home armed forces are composed of the land army, the air force and the navy, the two former being under the Ministry of War and the third under the Ministry of Marine.
The home army intended for garrison purposes and the defence of the mainland and of the adjacent islands (Azores and Madeira), comprises the active army and the army reserve (active and territorial).

There is, further, a recruiting reserve in which young men are registered before the preparation of the conscription lists (18 to 20 years).

Men belonging to the territorial reserve are only required to serve in the home army.

In peace time, the army is employed in recruiting, training and preparing for mobilisation the units and formations which are to be embodied in the field army; it provides the colonial army with the units and services which it requires, and it assists, when called upon, in maintaining public order, together with the other organisations specially intended for that purpose.

The colonial army comprises the whole of the military forces organised in each colony, their main purpose being to act as a garrison and defence force.

The military forces of a colony may be employed in another colony or in the home country.

The colonial troops are under the Colonial Minister, who acts through the various Governors. It is the duty of the Colonial Minister, and of the colonial authorities placed immediately under his orders, to use the colonial and home troops for the purpose of safeguarding the internal security of the colonies in which they are stationed.

I. Army.

ORGANS OF MILITARY COMMAND AND ADMINISTRATION.

The legislative bodies of the Republic (Senate and Chamber of Deputies in session) alone have power to authorise the Executive to make war. In time of war the Government of the Republic appoints a Commander-in-Chief, who is under the Minister of War and is in command of all troops and army services. He has supreme control of operations.

The Council for National Defence, at present in process of organisation, is called upon to examine any proposal of the Ministers concerned in matters relating to preparations for war and for the general defence of the State.
2. Supreme Council for the Mobilisation of Civil Industries.

This Council directs the studies and work for the preparation of industrial mobilisation (at present in process of organisation).

3. National Air Council.

The National Air Council is under the Prime Minister and is inter-ministerial in character; it is a permanent advisory organ for all questions relating to civil aviation.

It studies national and international air policy; prepares laws on aviation construction; explores air routes; informs the Ministers of War and the Navy, through the respective Air Directorates, of anything which may concern civil aviation; establishes liaison with the naval and military air forces through the respective Directorates.

The National Air Council works under the direction of the Prime Minister and consists of the following members:

- A Vice-President appointed by the Prime Minister;
- The Directors of Military and Naval Aviation;
- Delegates from the Ministry of Finance, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of Public Works and Communications and the Ministry of the Colonies;
- One legal expert in public international law;
- A secretary, with right of vote, who is a senior officer in the naval or military air force.

4. Ministry of War.

The War Minister is the supreme head of the Army.

The Ministry of War consists of:

- The Army Council;
- Three Directorates-General;
- The General Department (pensions, civil employees, reserve officers, etc.);
- The Minister's Secretariat.

The Army Council, which is presided over by the Minister of War, is an advisory organ; it consists of: the Adjutant-General, the Administrator-General, the Chief of the Staff of the Army, the Directors of Arms and Services, the Area Commandants, the Military Governor of Lisbon.

The first directorate-general, which consists of three divisions, deals with all questions relating to personnel.

The second directorate-general, which comprises four divisions, deals with all administrative questions and questions relating to productive establishments, remounts and military works. Attached to the second directorate-general are the commission for disputed claims in regard to military supplies, the fiscal board of the producing establishments and the technical remount commission.

The third directorate-general, which comprises four divisions, deals with all diplomatic questions and questions relating to general army training, home and colonial defence, army organisation, recruiting and mobilisation, transport, etc. Attached to the third directorate-general are a central fortifications commission, a central railways commission, a central telegraph commission, a central military air commission, a central commission for the physical training of the army and a military cartography commission.
5. Staff Service.

This service includes the work of the divisions of the third directorate-general of the Ministry and of the commissions attached thereto:

- Work relating to military history;
- Collaboration with headquarters' commands and directorates of arms.

Staff service is carried out by officers who have followed a staff course and who technically come under the Chief of the Army Staff.

This third directorate-general is under the orders of a general officer described as the Chief of Staff of the Army, who is assisted by a Deputy-Chief of Staff of the Army, a general officer or brigadier having followed a staff course.

The Chief of Staff of the Army is responsible for higher inspection in regard to all matters relating to the preparation of the army for war.

6. Directorates of Arms and Services.

For purposes of supervision over preparations for war and the training of the units of the arms and services and other establishments, there exist inspectors of infantry, artillery, cavalry, engineers, aviation, medical service, veterinary service and military administration.

7. Inspection Service.

(a) Ordinary inspections: general and partial;
(b) Extraordinary inspections: general and partial;
(c) Higher inspections.

Ordinary inspections are held at fixed intervals to ascertain the condition of military units and establishments in so far as concerns their organisation, training, discipline, readiness for mobilisation and administration.

The extraordinary inspectorates supervise, in general, the working of the various services and, in particular, the training and discipline of the troops and also administrative questions.

Higher inspections are in all cases extraordinary inspections and are carried out by:

(i) The Chief of Staff of the Army in all matters relating to the preparation of the army for war, that is to say, organisation, training, preparation for mobilisation and the defence of the country;
(ii) The Adjutant-General of the Army in all matters relating to the organisation and work of the various secretariats and archives and military records, with the exception of the accounts of the administrative councils and the military inspection councils in time of peace.

MILITARY TERRITORIAL AREAS.

The territory of Portugal (mainland and adjacent islands) is divided, as regards command, administration, etc., into twenty-three recruiting and reserve areas (including two in Madeira and the Azores), four military areas (Oporto, Coimbra, Tomar and Evora), and the military government of Lisbon.
The military command over the adjacent islands is exercised in the Azores by a colonel appointed ad hoc and in Madeira by an officer of the highest rank on duty in that island. The military command of Elvas is entrusted to a colonel, who holds the rank of inspector and is described as the Military Governor of Elvas.

In time of peace the military governors and area commandants are responsible for the administration and command of all forces stationed in or passing through their respective areas and are not responsible for duties relating to service or command which, organically or in virtue of superior orders, are independent.

The military governors or area commandants are also, for purposes of public order, in command of all forces or military establishments in the area over which they have authority.

The military governors or area commandants receive their orders from the Minister of War; these orders are transmitted to them through the Minister's secretariat or through the directorates-general of the Ministry of War.

Military governors and area commandants have their own headquarters, each consisting of: the general staff, the secretariat, the administrative council and headquarter troops.

COMPOSITION OF THE ARMY.

I. HIGHER FORMATIONS.

There are no permanently organised formations in the army in peace time higher than the brigade in the cavalry, the regiment in the other arms (groups in the Air Force), and the company in the services.

2. ARMS AND SERVICES.

(1934-35.)

Each arm or technical service of the army is under a directorate, the duties of which are essentially technical and also relate to preparation for war. The directors of arms have the rank of general, the directors of services the rank of colonel. They are appointed by the Minister of War.

The directorates are:
- Directorate of Infantry;
- Directorate of Artillery;
- Directorate of Cavalry;
- Directorate of Engineers;
- Directorate of Aviation;
- Directorate of the Army Medical Service;
- Directorate of the Army Veterinary Service;
- Directorate of Military Administration.

Infantry.

21 infantry regiments;
4 independent infantry battalions (in the adjacent islands);
9 battalions of light infantry;
2 cyclist battalions;
3 machine-gun battalions:
the accessory equipment companies (in process of organisation);
the light tank companies (in process of organisation).

Each infantry regiment comprises:
- Command; cadres for two battalions (regimental and training service); companies organised as effectives; depot of men (company).

Each battalion of light infantry comprises:
- 4 rifle companies;
- 1 machine-gun company;
- 1 headquarters; and
- 1 depot section.

Each cyclist battalion comprises:
- 2 cyclist rifle companies;
- 1 machine-gun company;
- 1 headquarters; and
- 1 depot section.
Each machine-gun battalion comprises:

3 machine-gun companies;
1 headquarters; and
1 depot company.

Infantry regiments in peace time are exclusively territorial units intended as training centres for infantry recruits and as mobilisation centres.

Light infantry and cyclist battalions are field units and are intended, together with the effectives which compose them in peace time, for the professional training of regular cadres (officers, sergeants and corporals), the advanced training of specialists, and general instruction; they may form detachments in combination with units of other arms.

The machine-gun and cyclist battalions are intended to serve as training and mobilisation centres.

Cavalry.

2 cavalry brigades, 2 regiments each (16 squadrons);
5 regional cavalry regiments (20 squadrons);
Motor machine-gun squadrons.

Each cavalry brigade is composed as follows in time of peace:

Command, 3 cavalry regiments (provisionally 2 regiments),
1 motor machine-gun squadron, 1 cyclist battalion, 1 group of horse artillery batteries.

Each regiment of the brigade has:

Command, and formation, 2 groups of 2 squadrons, depot squadron;
A section of 4 heavy machine-guns, a section of signallers and a platoon of sappers are attached to the command of each brigaded regiment.

Each regional regiment has:

3 squadrons and 1 depot squadron or 2 groups of 2 squadrons (one of the regiments has 3 groups) and a depot squadron.

All cavalry regiments are cavalry training centres; brigaded regiments are field units; regional regiments may be used as field units; they are mobilisation centres for squadrons and groups of squadrons, as well as training centres.

Artillery.

1. Light Artillery:

5 regiments, comprising all the special arms of the light artillery, including anti-aircraft batteries, listening-posts and range-finding and spotting sections;
2 independent mixed groups of mounted artillery, of 4 batteries each, of which 2 are of guns and 2 of howitzers (provisionally 2 batteries of guns and 1 of howitzers);
2 groups of horse artillery of 2 batteries each;
3 independent groups of mountain artillery of 4 batteries each (provisionally 2 groups of 3 batteries each).
2. Heavy Artillery:
   2 regiments of heavy artillery (provisionally 2 independent groups).

3. Coast Artillery:
   2 regiments including 6 tactical groups (14 batteries);
   1 submarine coast-defence group (2 batteries);
   1 group of specialists (2 companies);
   1 mobile coast defence group;
   4 mobile coast-defence batteries (adjacent islands);
   1 horse-drawn train company.

The regiments of light and heavy artillery are purely territorial units intended as training centres for recruits and mobilisation centres.

The mixed independent groups of mounted artillery and the independent groups of mountain artillery are field units designed more particularly for the professional training of permanent cadres—to supplement that of specialists—and for ensemble training, eventually forming detachments with units of other arms which do not train recruits.

The regiments of coast artillery are centres for the training of recruits and for mobilisation, also constituting centres for purposes of command and administration, for coast artillery groups and batteries, being designed to contribute with other auxiliary elements to the defence of the port of Lisbon.

Engineers.

1. Pioneers:
   Sappers and miners—2 regiments of sappers and miners (provisionally 1 regiment of 3 groups);
   Bridge train—1 bridge train battalion.

2. Lines of Communication Troops:
   Signallers :
   1 regiment of telegraphists;
   Brigades of telegraphists.

   Transport:
   Railways :
   1 regiment of railway troops;
   Railway brigades.

   Motor transport :
   1 motor-transport battalion (2 companies);
   Motor-transport brigades.

Military Air Force.

1 offensive and defensive regiment, in two groups (provisionally 1 group of 2 flights);
1 bombing regiment in 2 groups (provisionally 1 group of 2 flights);
2 observation groups (provisionally 1 group of 2 flights);
1 balloon battalion in 3 companies (provisionally 2 companies);
Anti-aircraft defence: in process of organisation.
The aviation and balloon units are not general training centres.

Air Services.

The Air Services include:

(a) The aircraft engineers service with:
    The signalling service,
    The meteorological service, comprising meteorological and aerological posts,
    The aircraft construction service;
(b) The medical service;
(c) The administrative services;
(d) The temporary military works service;
(e) Depots and offices.

Medical Service.

The Army Medical Service includes 3 companies which are centres for the training of recruits and for mobilisation.

Military Administrative Service: 3 companies.

---

AUXILIARY FORCES.

1. National Republican Guard.

The National Republican Guard is under the Ministry of the Interior and is intended for the maintenance of public order. It consists of the following troops:

(a) General Headquarters;
(b) 1 cavalry regiment (4 squadrons);
(c) 5 infantry battalions, including 3 mixed battalions (infantry and cavalry), consisting of 26 companies;
(d) 1 heavy machine-gun company.

These troops are distributed in all parts of Portuguese territory in sections and posts.

The individual arms of the guard are pistols, carbines and swords for cavalry; rifles with sabre-bayonet for infantry. Arms and materials not in regulation equipment but in the use of which instruction is given consist of a very limited number of light and heavy machine-guns used in exceptional circumstances.

The recruiting is voluntary. Recruits of 20 to 35 years, engaged for successive periods of three years, are drawn from soldiers liberated from active service or from army reservists. The training, which has no military character, is given by army officers.

1 For air material of the sea armed forces, see under "Navy".
The budgetary strength of the guard (1934-35) is 5,690 officers, N.C.O.s and men.

2. Revenue Guard.

The Revenue Guard, which is under the Ministry of Finance, is intended for Customs service and comprises 3 infantry battalions (16 companies) on the mainland and 4 infantry companies in the adjacent islands.

The individual arms of the Fiscal Guard are the sabre-bayonet and the revolver. Arms and materials not in regulation equipment but in the use of which instruction is given consist of carbines.

The method of recruiting is the same as for the National Guard. The training, which has no military character, is given by army officers.

The budgetary strength (1934-35) of the guard is 5,189 officers, N.C.O.s and men.

3. Police.

Public Security Police.

This police force is distributed in the 18 districts of Portugal, and in the island of Faial (archipelago of the Azores). The police force of each district is placed under the orders of army officers. The individual arms of the police force consist of rifles, pistols or revolvers, sabres or truncheons. The collective arms consist of a certain number of machine-pistols (only for police forces of the most important towns: Lisbon, Oporto and Coimbra).

The recruiting is voluntary. The guards of 21 to 35 years are engaged for successive periods of five years. Candidates must have accomplished their military service. Part of the time of the training is given up to drills and theoretical training having a military character and which are necessary for the maintenance of order.

The strength of the police force on May 1st, 1934, was 5,253 officers, N.C.O.s and men.

There exist, in addition, a Public Security Police of Lisbon and of Oporto (5,292 officers, clerks and guards), and also District Public Security Police forces; a Forest Police, a purely civilian force comprising 536 men armed with pistols and rifles, and a Criminal Investigation Police (274 men).

The actual time served in the units of the National Republican Guard, the Revenue Guard and the Public Security Police is regarded as having been served in the units of the home army.

RECRUITING SYSTEM AND PERIOD OF SERVICE.

(a) Period of Military Service.

Military service is general and compulsory from the ages of 17 to 45. It is divided as follows:

With the colours: four years (21 to 24).
In the active reserve: sixteen years (25 to 40).
In the territorial reserve: five years (41 to 45).
In the recruits' reserve: three years (18 to 20).

Recruits are absorbed into the active army during their twenty-first year, except for certain cases mentioned in the recruiting regulations.

The period of service with the colours to which soldiers are liable is, under normal circumstances, fifteen months, at the end of which they are released. Three months of this service are spent at the school of recruits and for twelve months the recruits are given additional specialist training.

The time spent at the school of recruits may be reduced in the arms and services when the proficiency of the recruits is such as to enable those who are on the point of completing their course and who are supernumerary to the permanent cadre, and also men previously incorporated and serving with the colours to be discharged.

Men discharged from the active army may be called to the colours by order of the Minister of War, simply on receipt of a conscription order from the officers commanding the units to which they belong.
Reserves (regular and territorial) may be called up only in virtue of a legal enactment of the Executive.

The personnel of the active army and of the active reserve can be called upon for military service on the mainland, in the adjacent islands, in the colonies or wherever national requirements may necessitate this.

Units or formations which are organised with the territorial reserve may be employed in any service and in any part of the home country. When the budget does not admit of the upkeep of the whole contingent during the total period prescribed for the school of recruits, men who have received adequate training at the school of recruits and who are surplus to the budgetary effectives are discharged in the following order:

1. Men supporting families;
2. Men who have applied to pay the tax for discharge;
3. Men who have drawn the highest number when lots are drawn.

(b) Exemption from Military Service.

The following are exempt from military service:

1. Men found unfit owing to physical defects;
2. Men less than 1.54 metre in height.

(c) Exclusion from Military Service.

Men who have committed certain offences or have lost their civil rights in Portugal are excluded from military service.

(d) Military Tax.

Every Portuguese citizen who does not serve in person in the army pays an annual tax of 30 to 50 escudos over a period of twenty-five years. This tax is applied to the purchase, manufacture and repair of mobilisation material. Persons who cannot be called upon for military service and those who belong to the Civil Guard, the Republican Guard and the Revenue Guard are exempt from payment of this tax.

(e) Exemption from Service in the Active Army.

Naturalised persons of 28 years of age and upwards and those who have actually served abroad for a period longer than that in force in Portugal are exempt. Portuguese citizens residing abroad who pay a sum equivalent to thirty pounds to the respective consulates are also exempt.

(f) Re-enlistment.

Men who so desire may, if they are well educated and if their record is satisfactory, re-enlist for annual periods.
(g) Preparatory Military Training.

A course of military preparation—preparatory military education—has been instituted in all the faculties of the universities, in all the high schools, and in all the public and private schools in which primary or secondary education is given. Attendance at these courses is compulsory.

Students at industrial and commercial institutions are required to attend the courses for militia officers.

These courses are for infantry and cavalry officers; in some cases, the students may be sent to a course in military administration.

(h) Volunteers.

Youths between the ages of 16 and 20 may, subject to certain conditions, be engaged as volunteers.

Cadres.

Officers.

Officers of the army are of three classes:

- (a) Officers of the permanent cadres;
- (b) Officers of the auxiliary service cadres;
- (c) Militia officers.

Officers of the permanent cadres are specially trained for permanent service in the various arms and services of the army. Militia officers are intended to supplement the cadres on mobilisation.
(a) Officers of the Permanent Cadres.

The military status of officers of the permanent cadres may be any of the following: on the active list, removed from the active list, in the reserve, retired, excluded from the service.

On the Active List.—Officers are on the active list when they are doing duty or may be called upon to do duty. They may be in any of the following positions:

- In the cadre of the arm or service;
- Temporary supernumeraries;
- Permanent supernumeraries;
- Attached;
- Unemployed.

Officers in the cadre of the arm or service are those who do duty under the Ministry of War and perform no other active service.

Temporary supernumeraries are officers supernumerary to the cadre fixed for each arm or service.

Permanent supernumeraries are officers promoted by brevet or special act, but not to fill any post in the cadre.

Officers attached to the cadre of the arm or service are officers serving as President of the Republic, those serving in other Ministries, in industrial establishments and in military educational institutions, those on indeterminate leave, and those belonging to the cadres of the air service and to the former General Staff.

Officers who are fit to serve but have not obtained employment from the Ministry of War are unemployed officers.

Removed from the Active List.—Officers temporarily excluded from the active list on account of ill-health or as a disciplinary measure.

Reserve.—Officers permanently excluded from the active list on account of age, inefficiency or unsuitability.

Retired.—Officers over 70 years of age and officers who are totally incapacitated for service or have failed in the performance of their professional duty.

Excluded from the Service.—Officers sentenced by the Supreme Council for Military Discipline.

Recruiting of Officers:

The admission of officers to the cadres of the arms and services, and admission to the rank of candidate officer, is allowed up to the age of 35 years, except in the case of the air force. Officers must be Portuguese citizens by birth.

Admission to the cadres of the infantry, cavalry, artillery, engineers and military administration is reserved to candidate pupils of the Military School and to candidate officers who have completed the course at the Central School for Sergeants and have actually served for two years.
Conditions of Promotion:

Second lieutenants of the various cadres may be promoted lieutenant after serving in the former rank for not less than:

- Infantry: 4 years
- Artillery: 2 years
- Cavalry: 4 years
- Engineers: 1 year
- Medical Service: 1 year
- Pharmaceutical Service: 3 years
- Veterinary Service: 2 years
- Military administration, military secretariat, auxiliary cadres of artillery, engineers and medical service: 4 years

Other officers of the various cadres are promoted to the next higher rank after serving not less than:

- For promotion to captain: 5 years
- For promotion to major: 12 years
- For promotion to lieutenant-colonel: 16 years
- For promotion to colonel: 20 years
- For promotion to brigadier: 22 years
- For promotion to general officer: 24 years

Age-limits for the Regular Army:

Officers are transferred to the reserve on attaining the following age-limits:

(b) Officers of the Auxiliary Service Cadres.

The officers of the auxiliary service cadres of the army are attached to the regimental offices and administrative councils of the various arms and services and regimental depots; some are made responsible for war material and quartering in barracks; others are attached to the recruiting and reserve district secretaries.

Promotion in the auxiliary service cadres is by seniority, the highest rank which sergeants of all arms and services can attain being that of captain.

(c) Militia Officers.

Militia officers are generally sent on furlough.
Officers in the militia may continue to serve in the army with all the rights conferred on officers in the permanent cadres, if they have been in the active army since August 7th, 1914, and if special conditions apply to them.

Recruiting:
Candidate officers for the militia, promoted after having completed their courses, enter the cadres of officers of the militia with the rank of candidate officers.

Promotion:
Promotion is governed by the rules applicable to officers in the permanent cadres, so that no one can be promoted to a rank immediately senior without an officer of the permanent cadre of the same arm or service being promoted to the same post.

Officers of the militia perform their military service subject to the same conditions as the men; they may be promoted up to the rank of commanding officer.

PRE-MILITARY TRAINING.
The Army Order Act stipulates that pre-military training is compulsory for youths of from 17 to 20 years of age in all secondary and higher educational establishments. As, however, no executory regulations have so far been issued, this provision has not yet been put into force.

2 Of the total of 50,475, 5,612 are N.C.O.s. Of these, 4,761 belong to the regular cadres. The remainder (851) will be gradually reduced in number until they are all discharged.

3 In 1930-31, as an extraordinary measure during thirty days, about 5,000 men were called up daily. These effectives are included in the total effects in the above table.

4 3,087 of the above 4,901 officers belong to the regular cadres. The remaining 1,814 will gradually be reduced until they are all discharged.

5 Cape Verde (87), Guinea (394), St. Thomas and Prince's Islands (147), Angola (4,577), Mozambique (2,648), India (1,414), Macao (934) and Timor (470); of the total strength of 10,668, 382 are officers and 566 are N.C.O.s.

6 The air effectives are included in the total effectives of the land armed forces.
2. Budgetary Effectives.

The figures in the following tables differ in character from the figures in the preceding table. These two kinds of returns are not comparable with each other.

Colonial Army.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

The colonial troops are under the various Governors, who in turn are under the authority of the Colonial Minister.

The colonial forces are an integral part of the Portuguese army and comprise the whole of the military forces organised in each colony and intended in principle for the garrisoning and defence of the colony; they may be employed in any part of Portuguese territory or abroad.

The colonial forces include European and native troops.

RECRUITING.

The European personnel of the colonial army is recruited from among officers, sergeants and men of the various arms and services of the home active army and from among young men residing in the colonies or born there.

Appointments are by means of voluntary enlistment or compulsory service.

The term of service is four years for volunteers and three years for those who are compelled to serve.

Military service is in principle compulsory for natives and begins at 20 years of age.

The term of service is fifteen years, namely:

(a) Ten years in the regular army;
(b) Five years in the territorial reserve.

COMPOSITION OF THE COLONIAL FORCES.

Colony of Cape Verde:
1 mixed platoon of native infantry and artillery;
1 St. Vincent native artillery section.

  - 1933-34: 1,950
  - 1934-35: 1,999

NOTES.

1. The figures shown for provisional results represent pay warrants issued.
2. Ministry of the Marine.—The expenditure of this Ministry includes expenditure for civil purposes, such as premiums for ship construction, subsidies to naval schools, lighthouses, pilotage services, mercantile marine, fisheries, harbour administration, etc., which, until 1929, were provided for mainly by a special fund for the protection of the mercantile marine.
3. While the greater part of the cost of colonial defence is borne by the colonies themselves, the budget of the Ministry of the Colonies covers certain military expenses of an administrative character (between 1 and 2 million escudos annually).
4. Expenditure on military aviation is included in the budgets of both defence Departments.
5. The above figures do not include pensions charged to the Ministries of War and the Marine. In the budget of the Ministry of Finance are included certain other classes of military and naval pensions. The amounts charged to the Defence Departments for pensions are as follows:
